

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword	pag.	XV
-----------------------	------	----

Chapter 1

Introductory profiles, method and objectives of the study

1.1. Subject matter and outline of the research	»	1
1.2. Reasons for investigating the relationship between international trade and climate change	»	2
1.3. The concept of ‘climate’ from a legal standpoint: preliminary remarks	»	4
1.4. Climate change, international trade and sustainable development	»	6
1.5. Methodological remarks	»	13
1.6. Delimitation of the ambit of the research and definition of its aim	»	16

Part I

Setting the scene: the relationship between climate and trade in the context of the trade-environment debate

Introduction	»	21
--------------------	---	----

Chapter 2

The climate change challenge in the context of international trade

2.1. Preliminary remarks	»	23
2.2. The causes of climate change and the international community’s acknowledgment	»	26
2.3. The effects of climate change	»	29

2.4. Climate migration and international trade	pag.	33
2.4.1. Preliminary remarks	»	35
2.4.2. Analyzing the impacts	»	37
2.4.3. The climate migration and trade nexus in its reverse: the international trade system, climate change and climate migration	»	38
2.4.4. Applying the exceptions of the WTO Agreements to the scenario of climate change-induced migrations	»	40

Chapter 3

Environmental protection and the international trade system

3.1. Preliminary remarks	»	47
3.2. Background to relevant legal instruments	»	49
a) The Montreal Protocol	»	50
b) The Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species	»	50
c) The Basel Convention	»	51
d) The Cartagena Protocol to the Convention on Biological diversity	»	52
3.3. The WTO and the environment	»	53
3.3.1. Principal legal aspects	»	53
3.3.2. Dispute settlement resolution within the WTO	»	55
3.3.3. The proportionality principle in WTO	»	57
3.3.4. Eco-labelling and the WTO	»	69
3.4. Unilateral trade-related climate change measure: preliminary remarks ..	»	80
3.4.1. An overview	»	80
3.4.2. The WTO and subsidies for renewable energy	»	83
3.4.3. EU Emissions Trading Scheme	»	91
3.4.4. Concluding remarks on the practice of unilateral trade-related climate change mitigation measures	»	107

Part II

The current state of play in climate change mitigation efforts: the international climate regime

Introduction	»	111
--------------------	---	-----

Chapter 4

*The normative framework of the climate regime:
the 1992 UN Framework Climate Convention and the subsequent work of the Conference of the Parties*

4.1.	Preliminary remarks	pag.	113
4.2.	Normative framework of the climate regime	»	115
4.2.1.	Object and purpose of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change	»	115
4.2.2.	Principles of the 1992 Framework Convention and of the Kyoto Protocol	»	117
4.2.3.	Obligations	»	121
4.2.4.	The ‘Flexibility Mechanisms’ of the climate regime: preliminary remarks	»	125
4.3.	The Berlin Mandate (1995) and the work of the Conference of the Parties between 1995-1997	»	128
4.4.	The Kyoto Protocol (COP-3, 1997)	»	128
4.4.1.	Stronger GHG emission reduction commitments (targets)	»	129
4.4.2.	The content of the negotiations	»	129
4.5.	The work of the Conference of the Parties between 2000-2008: the Hague Agreement (2000) and the Bali Action Plan (2007)	»	130
4.6.	The Copenhagen Accord (2009), the Cancun Agreements (2010) and the Durban Platform (2011)	»	133
4.6.1.	The Copenhagen Accord (2009): political (rather than legal) commitments	»	133
4.6.2.	The Cancun Agreements (2010)	»	138
4.6.3.	The Durban Agreement (2011)	»	143
4.6.3.1.	Extension of the Kyoto Protocol to a second commitment period	»	144
4.6.3.2.	The Durban Platform	»	144
4.6.3.3.	Creation of the institutions outlined in the Cancun Agreements	»	145
4.6.3.4.	Overall assessment	»	146
4.7.	Concluding remarks	»	147

Chapter 5

Analyzing the ‘flexibility mechanisms’ of the Kyoto Protocol

5.1.	Preliminary remarks	»	149
------	---------------------------	---	-----

5.2. The ‘flexibility mechanisms’ of the climate regime: International Emissions Trading	pag.	151
5.2.1. Private participation	»	151
5.2.2. The global carbon market and ‘linking’ of domestic trading schemes	»	153
5.2.3. Supplementarity to domestic action	»	156
5.2.4. In sum	»	156
5.3. The ‘flexibility mechanisms’ of the climate regime: the Clean Development Mechanism	»	157
5.3.1. Additionality	»	159
5.3.2. Prospects.....	»	159
5.4. The ‘flexibility mechanisms’ of the climate regime: Joint Implementation	»	161
5.5. Concluding remarks	»	162
Part III
Conflicts between climate measures and WTO law
Introduction	»	167
Chapter 6
The origin of normative conflicts: ‘fragmentation’ of international law
6.1. Preliminary remarks	»	173
6.2. Conflicts of norms	»	176
6.3. Definitions	»	176
6.4. ‘Permissive’ norms in the climate regime	»	178
Chapter 7
‘Climate measures’ and WTO law: general comments
7.1. Preliminary remarks	»	181
7.2. Limitation of scope of the measures	»	182
7.3. General compatibility of the objectives	»	182

Chapter 8

International Emissions Trading and WTO rules

8.1. Preliminary remarks	pag.	185
8.2. WTO concerns of sovereign exchanges in ‘emission units’		186
8.3. WTO concerns of private exchanges in ‘emission units’	»	189
8.3.1. Private trading with ‘emission units’ and GATT rules	»	189
8.3.2. Are all ‘emission units’ like products ?	»	192
8.4. Emissions trading affecting existing markets	»	193
8.4.1. Import and sale of energy products	»	193
8.4.2. Electricity as an energy product	»	195
8.4.3. Energy imports and national treatment rule	»	195
8.4.4. Like or directly competitive or substitutable products	»	196
8.4.5. No less-favourable treatment or effective equality of competi- tive conditions	»	197
8.4.6. Conclusions	»	199
8.5. GATT exception clauses	»	199
8.5.1. GATT Article XX letter g): relating to the conservation of exhaustible natural resources	»	199
8.5.2. GATT Article XX letter b): necessary to protect human, animal or plant life or health	»	202
8.5.3. Chapeau of GATT Article XX	»	203
8.6. Conclusions on the trade-related impact of International Emissions Trading rules	»	206

Chapter 9

The Clean Developed Mechanism and WTO rules

9.1. Preliminary remarks	»	207
9.2. Clean Development Mechanism activities as services under the GATS	»	209
9.3. Participation in Clean Development Mechanism activities and dis- crimination	»	213
9.4. GATS exception clauses	»	219
9.4.1. Policy in respect of the measure	»	219
9.4.2. Necessity	»	220
9.4.3. Chapeau	»	223
9.5. National development priorities under the Clean Development Mechanism	»	226

9.6. Conclusions on the trade-related impact of the Clean Development Mechanism rules.....	pag.	228
Concluding remarks on Part III	»	229

Part IV

*A possible solution:
sustainable development as a 'principle of integration'
of climate and trade law*

Chapter 10

The relevance of the principle of sustainable development as a general principle of international law

Introduction	»	233
--------------------	---	-----

Section I

Origins and development of the concept of sustainable development in international law

10.1. A concept with ancient roots?	»	234
10.2. Sustainable development's rise in the international order	»	235
10.3. Sustainable development in international treaty law	»	241
10.4. Sustainable development in regional and national laws	»	243
10.5. The 'new millennium'	»	245
10.6. Recent legal and political developments	»	249
10.7. In sum	»	251

Section II

Integration as a central aspect of sustainable development

10.8. Preliminary remarks	»	253
10.9. Integration within the limits of ecological thresholds	»	256
10.10. Climate sustainability: an ecological threshold	»	258
10.11. Scientific uncertainty	»	263
10.12. Environmentalism and sustainable development	»	264

10.13.	Integration and trans-generational ‘justice’	pag.	266
10.14.	In sum	»	269

Section III

Sustainable development in the context of international climate change law

10.15.	Preliminary remarks	»	271
10.16.	References to sustainable development in the UNFCCC	»	274
10.17.	References to sustainable development in the Kyoto Protocol and subsequent documents	»	275
10.18.	Implicit references to sustainable development	»	277
	10.18.1. Intra -generational equity: differentiation, partnership and funding	»	277
	10.18.2. Inter -generational equity	»	284
	10.18.3. Economic flexibility	»	286
10.19.	Concluding remarks on the content and role of sustainable development in the context of the climate regime	»	292

Section IV

Sustainable development in WTO context

10.20.	Preliminary remarks	»	293
10.21.	Sustainable development and trade law	»	294
10.22.	References to sustainable development in WTO law	»	296
	10.22.1. WTO Agreement	»	296
	10.22.2. Institutional developments	»	299
	10.22.3. WTO 2001-2006 Doha Development Agenda	»	302
	10.22.4. WTO dispute settlement	»	303
	10.22.5. Invocation of sustainable development in WTO law: procedural and substantive requirements	»	308
10.23.	In sum	»	310

Section V

Sustainable development as a general principle of international law

10.24.	Preliminary remarks	»	311
10.25.	Limitation of scope	»	313
10.26.	General principles in international law: their characters, function and the objection of indeterminacy	»	313
10.27.	Sustainable development as a general principle	»	317

10.28. The role of judiciary in promoting sustainable development.....	pag.	328
10.29. Concluding remarks	»	330

Chapter 11

Sustainable development as a judicial 'principle of integration' of (and of conflict resolution between) climate and trade rules

Introduction	»	331
--------------------	---	-----

Section I

Is there the need for the principle of sustainable development in WTO dispute settlement?

11.1. Preliminary remarks	»	332
11.2. Interpretation in international adjudication	»	333
11.3. Interpretation of WTO norms: principles and their limitation	»	336
11.4. Conclusions	»	354

Section II

Principles of conflict resolution

11.5. Explicit conflict clauses	»	357
11.6. Implicit conflict clauses in the Kyoto Protocol and in the UN Framework Convention	»	359
11.7. Lex specialis derogat legi generali	»	363
11.8. Lex posterior derogat legi priori	»	365
11.9. Conclusions	»	367

Section III

Applicability of 'non-WTO' law in WTO dispute settlement

11.10. WTO dispute settlement and public international law	»	368
11.11. Jurisdiction and applicable law in WTO dispute settlement	»	369
11.12. Sources of 'non-WTO' law in WTO dispute settlement	»	373
11.13. In sum	»	377

Section IV

Applicability of the principle of sustainable development in WTO dispute settlement

11.14.	Applicability as a part of WTO law	pag.	378
11.15.	Applicability as a general principle of law	»	379
11.16.	Mandatory or non-mandatory application?	»	379
11.17.	Dispute settlement authority and ‘judicial activism’	»	381
11.18.	In sum	»	382

Chapter 12

*Application of the principle of sustainable development:
practical consequences and case studies*

Section I

Practical consequences of the application of the principle of sustainable development

12.1.	The aim of creating coherence	»	385
12.2.	Nature of a ‘legal test’ for sustainable development	»	387
12.3.	Possible elements of a ‘legal test’ for sustainable development	»	390

Section II

Case studies:Applicability of the ‘legal test’ for sustainable development to the ‘flexibility mechanism’ of the Kyoto Protocol

12.4.	Introduction	»	399
12.5.	Applicability of the ‘legal test’ for sustainable development to the Clean Development Mechanism	»	399
12.6.	Applicability of the ‘legal test’ for sustainable development to Emis- sions Trading	»	407
12.7.	Summary	»	419

Final conclusions

13.1.	Areas of conflict between climate measures and WTO law	»	421
13.2.	Inherent limitations of other instruments of conflict avoid- ance/resolution and a possible solution to the ‘climate-trade con- flicts’: the principle of sustainable development.....	»	423

13.3. Sustainable development in climate change and international trade law	pag.	423
13.4. Sustainable development as a legal 'instrument of integration'	»	424
13.5. Application of the principle of sustainable development in the context of climate and trade conflicts	»	425
List of writings cited	»	429
Index	»	463