PUNITIVE DAMAGES AND PRIVATE INTERNATIONAL LAW: STATE OF THE ART AND FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS

Edited by
STEFANIA BARIATTI
LUIGI FUMAGALLI
ZENO CRESPI REGHIZZI
TABLE OF CONTENTS

List of Abbreviations .......................................................... pag. XIX

Chapter I

PUNITIVE DAMAGES: FOUNDATIONS TO START WITH

RENÉE CHARLOTTE MEURKENS

1. Introduction ........................................................................ p. 1

2. Characteristics of the civil sanction in American law ............... » 2
   - 2.1. Powerful civil sanction in a civil justice system .................. » 3
   - 2.2. The truth about excessiveness ........................................ » 6
   - 2.3. Punitive damages are generally awarded with great caution .......... » 9
   - 2.4. Insurability of punitive damages, cause for concern? ............... » 11

3. Reasons for the non-existence of punitive damages: prohibitive objections or not? .......................................................... » 12
   - 3.1. Problems relating to the traditional functions of tort law ........ » 13
   - 3.2. Problems relating to the public-private divide ....................... » 15
   - 3.3. Problems relating to the role of government ......................... » 18

4. The increased interest in punitive damages .......................... » 19
   - 4.1. Shifts from public to private law enforcement ................... » 20
   - 4.2. Calls for powerful civil sanctions ...................................... » 21

5. The status quo of punitive damages rejection ....................... » 23
   - 5.1. The European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) ................... » 24
   - 5.2. The legislator of the European Union .................................. » 25
   - 5.3. The Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) ................ » 27

6. Recommendations for the introduction of punitive damages ........ » 27

© Wolters Kluwer Italia
CHAPTER II
PUNITIVE DAMAGES AND THE FUNCTIONS OF REPARATION: SOME PRELIMINARY REMARKS AFTER THE DECISION OF THE ITALIAN SUPREME COURT, JOINT DIVISIONS, 5 JULY 2017, NO 16601

GIULIO PONZANELLI

2. THE REASONS FOR THE OVERRULING:
A) A NEW INTERPRETATION OF THE CONCEPT OF PUBLIC POLICY;
B) A NEW IDENTIFICATION OF THE INSTITUTION OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES AND
C) THE RECOGNITION OF THE SANCTIONING FUNCTION OF NON-CONTRACTUAL LIABILITY

4. COMPENSATION FOR NON-PECUNIARY LOSSES BETWEEN REPARATION AND PUNISHMENT

5. THE CONSEQUENCES OF THE DECISION OF THE JOINT DIVISIONS ON THE LEVEL OF COMPENSATION

6. SOME CONCLUSIONS

ABSTRACT

CHAPTER III
THE PURPOSE AND OPERATION OF THE PUBLIC POLICY DEFENCE AS APPLIED TO PUNITIVE DAMAGES

PIETRO FRANZINA

1. INTRODUCTION

2. THE RAISON D’ÊTRE OF PUBLIC POLICY

2.1. In the conflicts of laws

2.2. In the recognition of judgments

3. THE OBJECT AND NATURE OF THE ASSESSMENT
3.1. The effects of the foreign law or judgment concerned in the circumstances of the case .......... » 52
3.2. The 'regularity' of the foreign law or judgment in question ................................................. » 54
   3.2.1. A matter of 'international', not internal, regularity ................................................... » 55
   3.2.2. International standards as part of a State’s public policy ............................................ » 56
4. Assessing whether the public policy defence ought to be raised in a given set of circumstances ........ » 58
   4.1. A strict scrutiny ................................................................................................................. » 58
   4.2. An inherently discretionary assessment ............................................................................. » 59
   4.3. Taming the enfant terrible: some possible guidelines ..................................................... » 61
       4.3.1. The rank of the rules in which a particular value is enshrined ................................ » 61
       4.3.2. The seriousness of the infringement ........................................................................... » 64
       4.3.3. The ties between the situation and the forum .......................................................... » 65
5. The consequences of raising the defence ................................................................................. » 68
   5.1. In the conflicts of laws ........................................................................................................ » 68
       5.1.1. The ousting effect ....................................................................................................... » 68
       5.1.2. The subsidiarily applicable law .................................................................................. » 70
   5.2. In the recognition of judgments .......................................................................................... » 71
6. Concluding remarks .................................................................................................................. » 72

Abstract ........................................................................................................................................ » 73

CHAPTER IV
PUNITIVE DAMAGES AND INTERNATIONAL COMMERCIAL ARBITRATION

AMÉLIE SKIERKA - SONYA EBERMANN

1. Introduction ................................................................................................................................. p. 75
2. The law applicable to punitive damages in international commercial arbitration .................. » 77
   2.1. The law of the arbitral seat and public policy .................................................................... » 78
   2.2. The substantive law applicable to the dispute ................................................................... » 80
3. Recognition and enforceability of arbitral awards and foreign court judgments granting punitive damages ................................................................. » 82
   3.1. Recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards granting punitive damages ................. » 84

© Wolters Kluwer Italia
3.2. Recognition and enforcement of foreign court decisions granting punitive damages

4. Applying a proportionality standard to the recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards granting punitive damages
   4.1. Scope for review on the merits of arbitral awards under public policy exception
   4.2. Lack of certainty regarding the definition of proportionality
   4.3. Consequences of a finding of disproportionality

5. Mitigating the risks of dealing with punitive damages in international commercial arbitration

6. Conclusions

Abstract

CHAPTER V

PUNITIVE DAMAGES AND PUNITIVE DAMAGES ‘IN DISGUISE’ IN INTERNATIONAL COMMERCIAL ARBITRATION

ANTONIO LEANDRO

1. Preliminary remarks

2. Punitive damages and arbitration: selected method of analysis against the backdrop of the equivalence between arbitration and judicial function

3. Concurring characterization for the purpose of determining the law governing punitive damages as remedy or relief

4. Setting aside punitive damages awards for ‘incompatibility with public policy’

5. The perspective of the State in which the enforcement of a punitive damages award is sought

6. Partial concluding remarks

7. Breach of the obligation to arbitrate: truly punitive damages, ‘punitive damages in disguise’, and the right of access to justice

8. Recognition of punitive damages or ‘punitive damages in disguise’ for breach of the arbitration agreement and the Brussels I bis Regulation: a) awards

9. Continued: b) judgments

Abstract
CHAPTER VI
RECOGNITION OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES
IN GERMANY AND SWITZERLAND

ASTRID STADLER

1. INTRODUCTION .............................................................. p. 127

2. GERMANY .................................................................... » 130

2.1. Service of documents – Hague Service Convention ............................................................ » 130

2.2. Legal basis for the recognition of non-EU judgments ......................................................... » 134

2.3. Punitive damages before the German Federal High Court ...................................................... » 136

2.3.1. Applicability of rules on recognition of judgments in a ‘civil and commercial matter’ ..................... » 137

2.3.2. Public policy objection: no recognition of ‘real’ punitive damages in Germany .......................... » 139

2.3.3. Partial recognition of US punitive damages awards ............................................................ » 140

2.4. Developments in US and German law since 1992 ................................................................. » 141

2.4.1. Restrictions on punitive damages in the US and their effects ....................................... » 141

2.4.2. Deterrence and punishment as complementary functions of German tort law ................. » 142

2.4.3. Trends towards accepting deterrence as a function of damages awards in particular legal fields ......................................................... » 143

2.4.3.1. Defamation cases .................. » 144

2.4.3.2. Insurance law ........................ » 144

2.4.3.3. Labour law and antidiscrimination law ............................................. » 145

2.4.3.4. Intellectual property law ...... » 145

2.4.3.5. Antitrust law and unfair competition law ......................................................... » 146

2.4.4. Are statutory damages the new punitive damages? ....................................................... » 147

2.4.4.1. District Court Leipzig: non-recognition of excessively high statutory damages
CHAPTER VII
RECOGNITION AND ENFORCEMENT
OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES IN FRANCE

OLIVERA BOSKOVIC

1. INTRODUCTION .............................................................. p. 155
2. THE SOLUTION .............................................................. » 158
   2.1. No violation per se ........................................... » 159
   2.2. The conditions of violation of international public policy ........................................................ » 161
3. THE QUESTIONS ............................................................. » 164
   3.1. A general solution? .......................................... » 164
   3.2. The consequences of excessiveness .................. » 167

ABSTRACT............................................................................ » 171

CHAPTER VIII
RECOGNITION OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES
IN THE UNITED KINGDOM

ALEX MILLS

1. INTRODUCTION .............................................................. p. 173
2. PUNITIVE DAMAGES IN UK PRIVATE LAW ..................... » 175
   2.1. Punitive damages in English private law ............ » 175
   2.2. Punitive damages in Scottish private law ........ » 182
3. PUNITIVE DAMAGES IN THE RECOGNITION AND ENFORCEMENT OF FOREIGN JUDGMENTS ............ » 183
   3.1. Judgments for a ‘penalty’ .................................. » 184
   3.2. Public policy .................................................... » 188

© Wolters Kluwer Italia
CHAPTER IX
RECOGNITION OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES IN ITALY
GIACOMO BIAGIONI

1. PRELIMINARY REMARKS ................................................. p. 201
2. DOMESTIC LAW FRAMEWORK.......................................... » 203
3. RECOGNITION OF FOREIGN JUDGMENTS AND PUNITIVE DAMAGES ................................ » 205
4. THE EVOLUTION IN THE CASE-LAW OF THE ITALIAN SUPREME COURT............................................. » 208
5. ANALYSIS..................................................................... » 210
   5.1. The interpretation of the foreign judgment..... » 211
      5.1.1. Condemnation to punitive damages and other punitive or deterring measures............................................ » 213
      5.1.2. The determination of the punitive or deterring function of foreign civil liability measures....................................... » 214
   5.2. Compatibility with public policy...................... » 217
      5.2.1. Public policy and protection of public values.......................................................... » 220
      5.2.2. The sources of public policy......................... » 223
   5.3. Requirements for recognition of foreign judgments awarding punitive damages ..................... » 226
      5.3.1. Legality and predictability......................... » 228
      5.3.2. Proportionality........................................... » 229
6. PUNITIVE DAMAGES AS A POSSIBLE OUTCOME OF THE APPLICATION OF FOREIGN LAW................................................ » 231
ABSTRACT............................................................................. » 233

CHAPTER X
A HELICOPTER OVERVIEW OF THE RECOGNITION AND ENFORCEMENT OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES
CEDRIC VANLEENHOVE

1. INTRODUCTION................................................................. p. 235

© Wolters Kluwer Italia
Table of Contents

2. Spain: receptive attitude in 2001 Supreme Court judgment Miller v Alabastres » 236

3. Classification of the investigated countries » 239

4. Who is right? » 241

5. Excessiveness test: how much is too much? » 249

6. Conclusion » 252

Abstract » 252

---

Chapter XI

Towards a European Concept of Public Policy Regarding Punitive Damages?

WOLFGANG WURMNEST

1. Introduction p. 253

2. The concept of punitive damages » 255

3. European influences on public policy » 257

      3.1.1. Principle of proportionality as yardstick » 257

      3.1.2. Awarding punitive damages under the Convention? » 259

      3.1.3. Conclusion » 262

   3.2. European private law » 263

      3.2.1. Enforcement of EU rights through national law: the principle of effectiveness » 264

      3.2.2. Remedies of European secondary law » 267

      3.2.3. Conclusion » 270

   3.3. European private international law » 270

      3.3.1. The rules on public policy in the Rome II Regulation » 270

      3.3.2. Punitive damages disputes as ‘civil and commercial matters’ » 271

      3.3.3. The dispute around the qualifier ‘punitive damages of an excessive nature’ » 272

      3.3.4. Conclusion » 275

   3.4. Drawing the strings together » 276

4. The comparative perspective » 277

   4.1. Partial recognition and enforcement (severability) » 278

   4.2. Enforcement of the punitive part of the judgment » 280

   4.3. The black box: testing for ‘excessive’ damages » 282

© Wolters Kluwer Italia
CHAPTER XII

TOWARDS THE EUROPEANIZATION OF PUBLIC POLICY REGARDING PUNITIVE DAMAGES: AN INQUIRY BETWEEN THEORY AND PRACTICE

ORNELLA FERACI

1. INTRODUCTION: ABOUT THE DIFFICULTY OF OBSERVING AN INCOMPLETE STOP-MOTION SEQUENCE OF AN ‘UNRULY GALLOPING HORSE’

2. THE METHODOLOGY

3. THE THEORY: THE NEED FOR A RE-CONCEPTUALIZATION OF THE PUBLIC POLICY EXCEPTION?
   3.1. The interplay between the EU public policy and the national public policy
   3.1.1. Integration (and primacy) v coexistence (and subsidiarity)
   3.2. Negative and ‘positive’ function of the EU public policy
   3.3. In search of fundamental principles of EU public policy
      3.3.1. a) in the EU secondary law in light of the ECJ’s case law: from Manfredi to Kablowa case
      3.3.2. b) in the EU primary law: the principles of legality and proportionality
   3.4. The consequences of its application: full or partial refusal of enforcement
   3.5. The impact of the EU public policy regarding punitive damages in the field of conflict-of-laws (Rome II)
   3.6. The scope of the UE public policy towards punitive damages: the proximity criterion

4. THE PRACTICE: THE 2017 ITALIAN SUPREME COURT’S JUDGMENT AS A CASE STUDY
   4.1. A first level of interpretation
   4.2. A second level of interpretation

5. CONCLUSION

ABSTRACT

© Wolters Kluwer Italia