- DOROTY MURRAY - WILSON ANTOON, International arbitration in 2029 in a post-Brexit UK: 10 predictions (and a review of relevant English court decisions of the last 6 months)
- Introduction. — 1. The application of the New York Convention continues unchanged. — 2. England is still a highly friendly jurisdiction to international arbitration. — 3. England still rules the world in terms of support for asset tracing and preservation. — 4. The now-12-year-old Fiona Trust case is still the leading decision about the interpretation of arbitration agreements with its liberal approach. — 5 English Courts have the power to issue anti-suit injunctions in support of arbitrations and will do so. — 6. An ICSID award is res judicata in the UK from the date of the award. — 7. Brexit has led to a spike in English law arbitrations arising from contracts entered into in 2018 and 2019. — 8. To maintain its position as a global arbitral centre, the English Courts apply the highest standards of transparency to arbitrators. — 9. The legacy of Achmea is still felt in a post-Brexit Britain, but the UK is positioned as a centre for energy investments. — 10. To maintain its position as a global arbitral centre, The English Courts show due deference to sovereign rights of states.
- EDUARDO SAVARESE, Intra-EU BITs, ECT and the EU competence on FDI. Greentech v. Italy and the Tower of Babel 323
1. Introduction. — 2. Greentech v. Italy: the facts underlying the dispute. — 3. The jurisdiction of the Arbitral Tribunal and the Babel’s incommunicability: two opposite and irreconcilable positions. — 4. The tribunal’s approach on jurisdiction: two cohabitants with reciprocally unintelligible languages. — 5. The effects of the Achmea judgment on arbitrations based on ECT Article 26. — 6. The incommunicability’s perpetuation: the gaps in both international arbitral tribunals’ and the EU institutions’ approaches. — 6.1. The “sources of law” approach. — 6.2. The “institutionally self-contained” approach. — 6.3. The gaps in both the “sources of law” and the “institutionally self-contained” approaches: how to fill them? — 7. The importance of the merits stage: the majority decision in Greentech and the dissenting opinion of Professor Sacerdoti. — 8. A possible criterion for coordinating international investment law with the EU treaties at the merits stage of arbitral proceedings. — 9. The enforcement proceedings of arbitral awards before national courts within the EU: a residual solution for the purposes of coordination? — 10. Concluding remarks.

ZENO CRESPI REGHIZZI, Profili di diritto internazionale privato del commercio dei beni culturali

1. Introduzione. — 2. La legge applicabile ai profili contrattuali. — 3. La legge regolatrice dei diritti reali: gli inconvenienti causati dal verificarsi di un acquisto a non domino rispetto a beni rubati o illecitamente esportati. — 4. Segue: la difficoltà di qualificare come “diritti reali” le situazioni giuridiche costituite dalle norme pubblicistiche poste a protezione del patrimonio culturale. — 5. I correttivi proposti: il criterio della lex originis. — 6. Segue: l’introduzione, a livello sovranazionale, di norme materiali uniformi volte a garantire il ritorno di beni culturali illecitamente esportati e la restituzione di beni culturali rubati.
