Table of Contents

Table of Abbreviations XXI

Introduction: From Substantive Protection to Procedural Agency

1. The Central Problem: Substantive Entitlement and Procedural Capacity XXIII
2. The Boundaries of the Inquiry: Active Procedural Capacity, State Consent and Adjudicative Function XXIV
3. From Access to Justice to Procedural Agency XXVIII
4. Fragmented Literatures and the Need for a Cross-Regime Reconstruction XXXI
5. A Seven-Criterion Method for Comparing Procedural Agency XXXIV
6. Access, Regime Interaction and Climate Claims: The Questions Governing the Inquiry XXXVI
7. Differentiated Agency and Contested Subordination: The Propositions Tested XXXVII
8. Structure and Sequence of the Argument XXXVIII

Chapter I

From International Legal Personality to Procedural Agency: Foundations of the Cross-Regime Inquiry

Section I

From State Exclusivity to Differentiated International Legal Capacity

I.1. The Classical Construction of State Exclusivity 2
I.2. The Individual as a Configuration of Substantive and Procedural Capacities 7
I.3. Private and Collective Actors beyond State Exclusivity 11

Section II
From State Espousal to Direct Private Claims: Claims Commissions, Diplomatic Protection and Investment Arbitration

II.1. Claims Commissions and the Internationalisation of Private Losses 16
II.2. Diplomatic Protection and State Control over Invocation 19
II.3. Shareholders and Companies: The Limits of Protection 21
II.4. From the Calvo Clause to Investor-Controlled Claims 22
II.5. Investment Arbitration and Commercial Arbitration Distinguished 24

Section III
Disaggregating Procedural Agency: The Seven-Criterion Framework

III.1. Entering the Forum: Consent and the Stability of the Jurisdictional Gateway 27
III.2. Identifying the Claimant: Standing, Victim Status and Representative or Collective Capacity 29
III.3. Filtering the Claim: Admissibility and Threshold Review 31
III.4. Preserving the Claim: Provisional Protection and Procedural Duration 33
III.5. Financing the Claim: Costs, Legal Assistance and Third-Party Funding 35
III.6. Opening the Proceedings: Transparency and Non-Party Participation 37
III.7. Translating Determination into Redress: Binding Force, Remedies and Execution 38
III.8. The Limits of the Framework: Procedural Authority and Normative Reach 40

Section IV
The Comparative Corpus and Its Boundary Cases

IV.1. The World Trade Organization: Adjudication Reserved to Members 42
IV.2. The ECOWAS Community Court of Justice: Direct Access outside the Corpus 43
IV.3. The Seabed Disputes Chamber: Contentious Access by Private Contractors 44

IV.4. International Criminal Jurisdiction: The Reversed Procedural Relationship 46
IV.5. The Corpus as an Analytically Coherent Selection 46

Section V
From Fragmented Capacities to a Common Framework

Chapter II
Individual Access in International Human-Rights Procedures: Direct, Mediated and Conditional Models

Section I
The European Convention System: Direct Access within a Stable Treaty Gateway

I.1. Embedding Direct Access: State Consent after Protocol No. 11 53
I.2. Defining the Reach of Access: Article 1 Jurisdiction 55
I.3. Identifying the Applicant: Victim Status and Representative Capacity 57
I.4. Filtering the Application: Article 35 and Rule 47 59
I.5. Preserving Effective Access: Interim Measures and Procedural Duration 61
I.6. Financing Access: Formal Costlessness and Unequal Legal Assistance 63
I.7. Opening the Proceedings: Publicity and Third-Party Intervention 64
I.8. From Judgment to Compliance: Remedies, Pilot Judgments and Supervised Execution 65

Section II
The European Union Judicial System: Restricted Direct Access and National-Court Mediation

II.1. Restricted Direct Access: Article 263(4) TFEU after Plaumann 70
II.2. Mediated Access through National Courts: The Article 267 TFEU Route 73

II.3. Layered Access between Luxembourg and Strasbourg: Equivalent Protection and Its Limits 75
II.4. The Comparator's Result: Dense Entitlements, Mediated Access, Decentralised Enforcement 78

Section III
The Inter-American System: Direct Petition and Mediated Judicial Seisin

III.1. Direct Petition, Mediated Seisin: The Commission-Court Sequence 80
III.2. Financing Access and Representation: The Inter-American Defender and the Legal Assistance Fund 82
III.3. Collective Right-Holding and Expansive Reparation after Mediated Seisin 82
III.4. After Referral: Provisional Protection and Judicial Supervision of Compliance 85

Section IV
The African Court System: Direct Access through Revocable Consent

IV.1. Revocable Direct Access: The Article 34(6) Declaration and Its Withdrawal 89
IV.2. Broad Associational Standing within a Narrow Jurisdictional Gateway 93
IV.3. The Remaining Conditions of Access: Admissibility, Representation and the Legal Force of Judgments 94

Section V
The Human Rights Committee:
Direct Communication without Binding Judgment

V.1. Direct Communication through an Optional Treaty Gateway: Victim Status and Admissibility 97
V.2. The Practical Reach of Direct Communication: Extraterritoriality, Interim Protection, Duration and Cost 100
V.3. From Views to Domestic Effect: Interpretive Authority and the Limits of Follow-Up 101

Section VI
Human-Rights Procedures Compared:
Uneven Access, Control and Remedial Force

VI.1. Stability of the Gateway and the Instrument of Consent 104
VI.2. Control over the Claim during the Proceedings 105
VI.3. Cost and the Institutional Correction of Inequality 106
VI.4. Remedial Force and the Conditions of Implementation" 106
VI.5. Normative Reach and the Independence of the Two Comparisons 107
VI.6. The Findings Compared and the Transition to Investment Arbitration 108

Chapter III
Direct Private Claims in International Investment Law: Consent, Control and Enforcement

Section I
From State Espousal to Investor-Controlled Claims: The Procedural Premises of Investment Arbitration

I.1. From Diplomatic Protection to Investor-Controlled Claims 112
I.2. The Juridical Character of the Investor's Entitlement 112
I.3. The Protected Claimant and the Standing Offer to Arbitrate 114
I.4. Residual Diplomatic Protection and the Impetus to Reform 115

Section II
The ICSID System after the 2022 Rules:
Reform within a Stable Jurisdictional Architecture

II.1. The Article 25 Gateway: Consent, Investor Status, Investment and Abuse 116
II.2. Perfecting Consent and Allocating Forum: Treaty Offers, Umbrella Clauses and Contract Claims 122
II.3. Preserving Rights before the Award: Provisional Measures under Article 47 and Rule 47 125

II.4. The Financial Architecture of Access: Costs, Funding, Security and Expedited Proceedings 128
II.5. Opening Investor–State Proceedings: Transparency and Non-Disputing-Party Participation under Rules 62–68 135
II.6. From Award to Recovery: Finality, Annulment and Recognition 139
II.7. Immunity, Execution and the Transferability of the Award 140

Section III
UNCITRAL/PCA Proceedings: Ad Hoc Arbitration and Domestic Judicial Supervision

III.1. Commencing the Claim without Registration Screening: Notice, Constitution and Threshold Review 148
III.2. Corrective Authority before and after the Award: Arbitrator Challenges and Seat-Court Review 150
III.3. The Procedural Conditions of Ad Hoc Access: Costs, Expedited Arbitration and Transparency 152
III.4. From Award to Enforcement: Setting Aside and the New York Convention 157

Section IV
The Energy Charter Treaty and the Temporal Reconfiguration of Consent

IV.1. The Article 26 Gateway: Standing Offer, Acceptance and Jurisdictional Limits 163
IV.2. Fragmenting the Treaty Framework: Withdrawal, Modernisation and Intra-EU Reordering 164
IV.3. Surviving Withdrawal: Article 47(3) and Pre-Withdrawal Investments 169
IV.4. Pending Claims as a Test of Temporal Consent 171
IV.5. Jurisdictional Reordering beyond Substantive Convergence 175

Section V

Reforming Investor–State Dispute Settlement: Adopted Procedural Standards and Unresolved Institutional Design

V.1. Reform without Treaty Replacement: Adopted Texts and Conditions of Application 179
V.2. Proposed Permanent and Appellate Tribunals: Standing Adjudication without Settled Jurisdiction 181
V.3. The Reform Programme and the Redistribution of Procedural Authority 183

Section VI

Direct Investor Agency: Strong Procedural Control within Narrow and Costly Gateways

VI.1. Consent, Standing and Admissibility 186
VI.2. Provisional Protection 187
VI.3. Cost, Funding and Transparency 188
VI.4. The Final Award: Finality, Recognition and Execution 188
VI.5. The Comparative Finding and Its Relation to Chapter II 189
VI.6. Transition to Climate-Related Practice 190

Chapter IV

Climate Obligations and the Claimant Deficit: Individual, Collective and Advisory Pathways

Section I

General Climate Obligations and the Claimant Deficit

I.1. The Structure of Climate Obligations and the Absence of a Determinate Respondent 193
I.2. The Substantive Right and Its Uneven Procedural Availability 198
I.3. The Claimant Deficit and the Composition of the Corpus 200

Section II
From Climate Harm to a Human-Rights Claim:
Positive Obligations and Individual Access

II.1.	Positive Obligations and the Convention Basis of the Claim	203
II.2.	Victim Status and the Threshold of Individual Exposure	204
II.3.	Constructing the Obligation: Discontinuity, Causation and External Instruments	205
II.4.	Individual Communications beyond Strasbourg: The Covenant Route	207
II.5.	Territorial Jurisdiction and the Limits of Individual Access	208
II.6.	Interim Protection and the Temporal Structure of Climate Harm	210

Section III
From Individual Victim Status to Collective Representation:
Associational Standing in Climate Cases

III.1.	Associational Standing: Conditions and the Redistribution of Procedural Authority	212
III.2.	The Objection of Actio Popularis	214
III.3.	Procedural Agency as Multidimensional: Jurisdiction, Standing and Admissibility Compared	215
III.4.	Instrumentalisation and the Separation of Entitlement from Capacity	216
III.5.	Compliance Review without Victim Status: The Aarhus Procedure"	218

Section IV
Rights within the Transition:
The Design and Distribution of Climate Measures

IV.1.	Bidirectional Claims and the Law of Just Transition	220
IV.2.	Cultural Rights and Renewable-Energy Infrastructure	221
IV.3.	Participation Obligations and the Threshold of Individual Complaint	222
IV.4.	Employment and the Social Consequences of Decarbonisation	224
IV.5.	Bidirectionality Qualified	224

Section V
From Contentious Access to Advisory Participation: Private Actors without Party Status

V.1. Four Proceedings and Their Jurisdictional Bases 226
V.2. Participation Regimes Compared 227
V.3. The Substantive Determinations and Their Influence on Contentious Proceedings 228
V.4. Consequences for Investment Claims 230

Section VI
Climate-Related Pathways Compared: Fragmented Access and Uneven Remedial Authority

VI.1. The Jurisdictional Gateway 232
VI.2. Claimant Status and Representation 233
VI.3. Admissibility 233
VI.4. Cost and Financing 234
VI.5. Provisional Protection and Duration 234
VI.6. Transparency and Participation 235
VI.7. The Legal Force of the Outcome 236
VI.8. Findings and the Transition to the Synthesis 239

Chapter V
Procedural Agency and the Architecture of International Claims: Regime Interaction and Community Interests

Section I
Remedial Inversion and the Uneven Distribution of Procedural Authority

I.1. The Independence of Substantive Protection and Procedural Agency 241
I.2. The Distribution of Authority across Procedural Stages 243
I.3. The Temporal Security of a Conferred Capacity 244
I.4. Contested Subordination Introduced 245
I.5. Personality Reconsidered: Capacities rather than Status 246
I.6. The Reconstructive Character of the Conclusions 247

Section II
Procedural Agency as a Category beyond Subjecthood and Participation

II.1.	Beyond the Subjects–Objects Division	250
II.2.	The Spectrum of Procedural Positions	251
II.3.	Representation and Autonomous Associational Standing Distinguished	253
II.4.	The Beneficiary without Invocation	254
II.5.	Procedural Agency as a Method of Reconstruction	255

Section III
Contested Subordination: Regime Interaction through Interpretation and Jurisdictional Reordering

III.1.	Fragmentation and the Institutional Dimension	257
III.2.	Routes by which External Rules Enter the Forum	259
III.3.	Selective Coordination rather than Convergence	261
III.4.	Techniques of Reordering and Their Distinct Effects	262
III.5.	Erga Omnes Character and Jurisdiction Distinguished	263
III.6.	The Institutional Dimension in the Energy Charter Practice	264
III.7.	The Finding: Why the Techniques Cannot Deliver the Claim	265

Section IV
Community Interests and the Mismatch between Protection and Procedural Form

IV.1.	Community Interest and the Requirements of Contentious Procedure	266
IV.2.	Techniques for Constructing an Authorised Claimant	267
IV.3.	The Difficulty of Individuating Community Harm	268
IV.4.	Contested Subordination Refined: The Stages of Interaction	269
IV.5.	The Consequence for Legal Personality	270

Section V
Individuating the Claim:
Duplication Rules and the Limits of Collective Redress

V.1. Duplication Rules in Human-Rights Procedures 272
V.2. Parallel Litigation in Investment Arbitration 273
V.3. Individuating Cumulative Climate Harm 274
V.4. Collective Interests and Individual Remedies after a Violation 274
V.5. Domestic Proceedings and the Limits of the Reconstruction 275

Section VI
When Protection Becomes Access: Obligations, Authorised Claimants and Legally Consequential Relief

VI.1. The Disparity and Its Source 278
VI.2. The Classification of Obligations 278
VI.3. Reciprocal, Integral and Interdependent Structures 279
VI.4. The Inversion of Standing between States and Individuals 280
VI.5. Subjective Right and Reflex Right 281
VI.6. Determinacy of Conduct and Remedy 282
VI.7. The Allocation of Authority to Invoke 283
VI.8. The Insufficiency of Structure 283

Section VII
The Questions Answered and the Conclusion of the Book

VII.1. The Legal Character of Individual Access 285
VII.2. The Relationship between Human-Rights and Investment Protection 286
VII.3. The Boundaries of Adjudicative Access in Climate Practice 287
VII.4. Substantive and Procedural Development Distinguished 288
VII.5. Conclusion 289

Table of Cases 291

Bibliography 307